

Agitación global del desarrollo: un embarque terapéutico ocupacional

Nayjane Siqueira Juvencio de Almeida, Luciano Belas e Silva Filho, Karoliny Teixeira Santos, Erika Carla Cavalcanti Gomes, Cíntia Bastos Coelho, Ana Carollyne Dantas
Univerdidad Federal de Pernambuco, Recife, Pernambuco, Brazil

A healthy relation between mother and baby allows the constitution of the subjectivity of the subject. A motherly unsatisfactory relation can bring a sort of lack that produces anxiety and compromises the constitution of the subjectivity of the child, being able to lead to disturbances comportamentais, among them, the psychosis. The psychoses in the childhood are questioned and for denied times, especially what concerns the questions you conceptualize and to the different classifications existent. The intervention of the Occupational Therapy in the childlike psychosis takes as an objective the search of means that help the participation of the patient in the more satisfactory form in his environment. The aspects offered by the therapeutic occupational healthy treatment as varied as possible, and it maintains straight relation with the limitations of the child, which can be the incompetence of abstraction, of verbal expression, and of social reciprocal interaction. Inside this context, the objective of this work did a revision of literature about the childlike psychoses and the acting of the Occupational Therapy in this context. The information were obtained through inquiry in the bases of data BIREME and SCIELO in the last eight years. The childlike psychoses were defined and classified, looking to present the therapeutic occupational intervention. The difficulties in his diagnosis in the childhood are emphasized, as well as them therapeutic resources used for this approach. It is possible to end that the actions implemented by the Occupational Therapy in children with Upsets Global of the healthy development of great importance, as soon as they help in getting necessary skills to the interaction with the way, as well as in conquest of his plenitude itself, favoring so a better quality of life.